THOMAS COBB OF BOSTON AND HIS DESCENDANTS

THOMAS COBB was one of the pioneers of the Cobb family in America. It does not appear that he was related to any of the several other original immigrants who settled in New England and Virginia. His former home was the town of Banbury, in Oxfordshire, England. This place is an old market-town, well known as the location of Banbury Cross of the children's rhymes and famous for its Banbury cakes. Its most marked characteristic during the seventeenth century was devotion to the puritan cause in politics and religion, so much so that it became a common butt of ridicule for all the royalist wits. Growing up in this atmosphere, Thomas Cobb was saturated with the puritan spirit and became one of the protesters among the protestants. His adherence to non-conformist worship doubtless was a most important factor leading to his emigration to America. While he was married in an English church and some of his children were baptized in the church, this may have been a matter of legal requirement rather than a religious choice.

In his youth he doubtless received some schooling, for we find he could sign his name in a free, bold hand, in a time when many men were content simply to make their marks. His boyhood was during the stirring times of the Civil War. The battle of Edgehill, the first in the war, was fought when he was a youth, within a half-dozen miles of his home, and later, the town of Banbury was captured and held successively by the parliamentary and royalist armies.

In 1642, when Banbury was captured and occupied by the royalists, the King put forth a declaration of pardon to all in Oxfordshire who had taken up arms against him, except Lord Saye, Nathaniel Fiennes, Sir William Cobb of Adderbury and John Dooley, Esq. Adderbury is a small town about four miles from Banbury and was the home of an aristocratic family making claim in the "Visitations of Oxfordshire" to a long line of ancestors of gentle birth. At the head of this family was the Sir William Cobb whom King Charles refused to forgive. We do not find definitely the relationship between this man and Thomas Cobb of Banbury, but it is evident that they were both of the puritan party and subject to the displeasure of the royalist government and may have been kinsmen. Thomas Cobb was married four years before the Restoration and continued to live in Banbury throughout the reign of Charles the Second. Soon after the death of the King, which occurred February 6, 1685, we find the Cobb family on its way to America. Doubtless a strong reason for their emigration was the severity of the laws against non-conformists.

Thomas Cobb and his fellow travelers relate, in the petition made after they reached Boston harbor, that "the occasion of our coming hither—was in affect no other than that of the bird flying into the Sennetor's Bosom for shelter when it was furiously chased by a fowle of prey." This flowery language means without doubt that they emigrated to avoid being thrown into prison by the authorities on account of their religious and political beliefs and practices.

During the summer of the year 1685 both Argyle and Monmouth had invaded England with rebel troops and the country seethed with excitement, culminating in the "Bloody Assizes" and the execution of the two leaders and many of their followers.

Our emigrants sailed about the first of June, and it was none too soon, for a few weeks later it would have been impossible to get away. On August 28th, Samuel Sewall of Boston heard "news of Argyle's being taken and of Monmouth's being in Arms in England, with Rumors of a great Engagement and 30 or 40,000 slain, . . . many are clapt up in London, so that the Halls full."

We will give at this point some extracts from the parish registers.

August 30, 1659.	Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas Cobb, buried.
October 5, 1669.	Sarah Cobb, daughter of Thomas Cobb, buried.

It will be noted that the first two Banbury entries, made during the Commonwealth, give the dates when the children were born, while the next three, made after the Restoration, are dates of baptism.

About the first of June, 1685, Thomas Cobb, his wife Dorothy and son Richard embarked, quite probably at London, on a ship that was commanded by Captain William Condey and sailed for America. The daughters Elizabeth and Sarah had died some years before and we have no knowledge as to what became of the other children. If they were then living they were of adult age. During the voyage four cases of small-pox developed on the ship, so that the vessel was quarantined when it reached Boston harbor on the 31st of July. The time of crossing the ocean was a little over eight weeks. On reaching port the passengers were not allowed to land in the town, but were placed on Lovell's island in the harbor, where they suffered much from lack of proper protection and care. They were confined there for thirteen days, with poor supply of water, with no house to shelter them and no beds to lie upon. After much delay, in response to their petition, they were permitted to land in Boston on the 13th of August. Captain Condey died on the 25th of the month (whether of small-pox or not, we do not know) and was buried in the Granary Burying Ground.

The petition to the governor reads as follows:

For The Honourable Sir Simon Bradstreet Esq. present.

August the 12.

Honoured Sir, Once allready have we taken the Boldness to write a few lines directed unto your worships, together with the rest of the commissioners, wheare in a few words we signified unto you the ocasion of our coming hither, which was in affect no other than that of the bird flying into the Sennetor's Bosom for sheltor, when it was furiously chassed by a fowle of prey, the story is famious & therefore we suppose it known unto you and so we shall Leave it unto your consideration and aplication.

We allso signified unto you the inconvenience of the place of our confinement viz. that their is no house upon the place, that their is no fresh water, together with many other inconveniences, to many for us in writ-ing for trouble you with. Not hearing nothing from you we adventured a second time to caste a few lines into your hands that you might come to have a right understanding of our condition, for we understand that you have many false informations for instance that many amonge us have not had the small pox and that some of us are sicke of them now and that one hath been buried upon the sea, and all which things and many others of the like nature are very untrue, for as to the first we have all had the distemper in old England many years since but only four persons had them on board and have been well six weeks and upwards neither have any been taken away by death since we came on shore, that we are not well is true for we have paines in our limbs ocasioned by our lying upon the cold ground. Therefore we humbly entreat your worships serious consideration of our condition in order to our admittance into your townes that we may be in a capacity to provide for ourselves and families. We have the same argument to make use of which God himself made an argument to press his own people with to be kind to strangers. Remember that some of you and your predessessors weare strangers in this land. We shall trouble you no more at present but subscribe ourselves your worships most humble servants in all Christian obedience to be Commanded.

In answer to the petition or motion, the town magistrates ordered that the petitioners have their liberty on the morrow to come on shoar & provide for themselves. August 12 1685 Attest Edward Rawson Sec. By order.

Samuel Sewall has given in his diary the following account of the arrival of the ship and the subsequent events:

Sewall's Diary, 1685

Friday, July ult Condey arrives, hath had the Small Pocks of which Jno. Cutts, his own son, a youth, and one more are dead: but 'tis said have been well a 14 night. When came a little above the Castle, took in the Colours and cast Anchor, and a Man coming from on Board would not tell what the matter was, so began to noise it that the new Governour was come, flocking to the waterside. Not considering that Condey came out before Green.

Satterday Augt. 1. An order from the Council is signed to cause the ship to remove lower to Lovel's Island and there the Passengers, Ship, and Goods between Decks to be Aired: None to come to any Town till further Order. And None to entertain persons coming from the Ship. Yet Mr. Vaughan and Wyar gone homeward.

July 29th. Mr. Nath. Green arrives this day, come from London June the 6.

Augt. 26 Mr. Condey the Shipmaster dyes about 9 last night. Hath been sick but a little while.

Augt. 27. Mr. Thomas Bayley preaches in Mr. Mather's Turn. After Lecture Capt. Condey buried. Gloves given to the Magistrates.

Three days after he landed we find Thomas Cobb joining the First Baptist Church of Boston, as shown by the following entry:

"Cobb, Thomas adm. Aug. 16, 1685."

The authorities required that every new-comer should furnish security that he should not become a charge upon the town. Our immigrant found a bondsman in Thomas Skinner, a baker, also a member of the First Baptist Church.

"Sept. 4, 1685. Thomas Skinner became surety to the town for Thomas Cobb, blacksmith, and his family."

In the tax lists of 1687 we first find the names of Thomas and Richard Cobb and gather a little information about them. It is apparent that they lived together in a house in the eighth precinct or ward in the south end of the town of Boston near the house of Samuel Sewall. Richard is listed for one head, 1s-8d, being this year twenty-one years of age, but is not taxed for a house or other property. This is what we should now call a poll-tax. Thomas is taxed for one head also, 1s-8d, and in addition 4d for his house and other property, making a total of 2s. The 4d represented a tax at the rate of a penny per pound on a valuation of four pounds. Though this tax does not seem large, one third of the amount could be abated if the tax was paid in money and not in farm products. In the "Boston Valuation" of 1688, which is a "List of the male Persons in the Town of Boston from Sixteen yeares old and upwards" we find in the 8th ward "Tho Cobb" and "Rich Cobb," each listed for "one head," which indicates that Thomas Cobb did not have any other son living in his house with him 16 years old or older. From this the conclusion is that the other sons did not come to America. The lists throw no light upon women in the family. "A List of Inhabitants in Boston 1695" gives these names:

"..... Cob Senr"
 "Richard Cob Junr"

This expresses the relative ages of the two men and probable relationship of father and son.

Thomas Cobb established himself in his trade as a smith in the south end of Boston, probably on what is now called Washington street. While living there he had some difficulty with his apprentice whom he accused of stealing his property. This is shown in the following extracts from the Court Records:

Suffolk Court. 4346. Case of Jonathan Barney

At a Court of Gen ll Sessions of ye Peace holden at Boston for ye County of Suffolk October 6 1696.

Wee the Grand Jurors for our Sovereigne Lord William the Third over England Scotland Franse & Ireland King Defender of Fath &c do present Jonathan Barney of Boston White Smith now or late an apprentice on Covenant, servt of Thomas Cobb's of sd Boston White Smith for th he ye sd Jonathan Barney on or about ye twenty ninth day of July last past did steal several wares belonging to his sd Master out of his Shop in Boston, and also cash taken out of his chest in his sd Thos Cobbs house in Boston aforesd also ten shillings new Engld money the day after ye last trayning day in Boston also sixty shillings more owned by sd Jonathan Barney to be by him taken away from his sd master Thos Cobb contrary to ye Peace of or sd Sovereigne Lord ye King & the wholsome Laws in that case made & provided Endorsed "Ignoramas" and names of witnesses scratched over.

The names of the three witnesses require some explanation. The first is Thomas Cobb who has made the complaint and the second is doubtless his wife Dorothy Cobb. The third, Peter Marshall, was the signer of Jonathan's bond as an apprentice. Jonathan is described as an "apprentice on Covenant," and his bondsman was liable for any acts of dishonesty on the part of the apprentice. The endorsement "Ignoramas" indicates that the grand-jury brought in a verdict of "We do not know." It appears that afterwards Jonathan Barney moved to Rhode Island and civil suit was brought against him and his bondsman, Peter Marshall, in Newport, for damages due to the theft.

The Court of Trials at Newport rendered a verdict in favor of Thomas Cobb, which was appealed by the defendant to the General Assembly of the Colony. This body, acting in its capacity as the supreme court, handed down the following decision:

Proceedings of the General Assembly, 25, Oct. 1704.

Records of Colony of Rhode Island, 3:512.

Peter Marshall, appellant, Thomas Cobb, of Boston, appellee, from a judgement of a Court of Trials, held at Newport, the first Tuesday in September last past, where the appellant had a verdict of jury and judgment of Court passed against him, for ten pounds and cost of Court, and the appellant praying (for) remedy for his great charge &c, giving in his reasons to this Assembly, who having considered the same do order as followeth:

That the verdict of jury delivered in said Court of Trials, for the payment of ten pounds, be continued, and that the several actions in the severall Courts of Trials between the appellant, Jonathan Barney, in the bond upon which the actions were commenced, and the appellee, that each and either of them bear their own severall charges and costs of Court, on each action past, and the present charge and cost to be equally borne between them, the said appellant and appellee, and that the ten pounds be forthwith paid unto the Sheriff, to answer the above said judgment, after execution is granted.

In all the records there appears but one more item relating to the wife of Thomas Cobb. This is in the Boston Death Record and reads as follows:

"1705-6. Apr. 18. Mrs. Cob buried. (Old sextons' bills.)"

Probably soon after the death of his wife, Thomas Cobb moved from Boston to Hingham, Mass., where his son Richard was then living. Here Samuel Sewall found him a few years later, as he notes in his diary:

"Mar. 28, 1707. Then I left the company and went to Hingham; visited Mr. Cobb, Mr. Norton, cousin Hobart."

Thomas Cobb was then nearing the end of his life; the last reference to him is in Hingham records:

"Thomas Cobb, Sen. dyed, the 4th day of January, 1707-8."

It is probable that he was buried in the beautiful cemetery adjoining the "Old Ship" meeting house, but no stone marks his grave.

2. RICHARD COBB, (Thomas¹), bapt. at Banbury, England, Aug. 11, 1666; d. at Hingham, Mass., June 1, 1709. He came to America with his father in 1685 and settled in Boston, where he worked at his trade as a blacksmith and locksmith. His shop was located in the south end of Boston on the "main street," adjoining the house of Thomas Wallis. He had leased it from Edward Durant at a yearly rental of three pounds, for the term of five years, beginning on Nov. 23, 1696. In 1708, Edward Durant sued him for £5-11s.-6d. unpaid rent, and the writ was served upon him at Hingham on Mar. 22, 1707-8. Durant recovered judgment for £4-18s. for the debt and £2-1s.-8d. costs of suit.

Richard Cobb moved from Boston to Hingham, his wife's old home, about the year 1704. It is probable that he shared in the division of the property of his wife's parents after their death, for in the records of 1709 we find a boundary reference to the land of Richard Cobb in Hingham.

In 1704, he became involved in a lawsuit as to the ownership of the iron tires for a pair of cart-wheels. It appears that these tires had been made by him upon the order of Terence Henley and were then sold by Henley to Arthur Mason. Henley claimed that Cobb owed him money and that he was employing him on this job to work out the debt. There was a dispute about this and Cobb refused to deliver the tires, therefore Mason sued him for possession of them. Decision was rendered in favor of Mason. The case is found in Suffolk Co. Early Court Files, 6038, 6271.

Richard died Dec. 27, 1771, in his 77th year.

Richard Cobb lived in Hingham on a piece of land between the Town Cove and the Harbor, 6 acres of which he purchased in 1723 from Mary Gross and her son Thomas, and the remainder, 8 acres, in 1731, from John Lewis. Upon this land was a high hill, which has been largely excavated for the gravel, and known until very recent times as "Cobb's Bank", though the memory of Richard himself has passed away in the neighborhood.

Estate of Richard Cobb. February 20, 1772, Esther Cobb, widow, of Hingham, was appointed administratrix of estate of Richard Cobb, late of Hingham, Lighterman, deceased, intestate. Inventory taken April 10, 1772, by John Thaxter, Benja. Cushing and Joseph Andrews was sworn to July 21, 1772, by Samuel Johnson, Attorney to Esther Cobb.

The value of the real estate was set at £100 and the personal property at £9-3-0, making a total of £109-3-0. Samuel Johnson and John Holbrook signed the bond. The land was sold to Elisha Leavitt for £101-17-4 reserving to the widow a life interest in the dwelling-house, use of the well and garden. After payment of expenses and debts, there remained the sum of £18-7-5 $\frac{3}{4}$, which was distributed as follows:

(2), Thomas Lovis, as his second wife, probably some time previous to 1770, for in this year Richard Cobb deeded him ten rods of his land "on which said Lovis by my consent or permission has set up the frame of a small house." Mary, the former wife of Thomas Lovis, died Feb. 7, 1765, aet. 47. Thomas Lovis died May 17, 1811, aged 95 or 100 years. Esther Lovis died in Hingham, Oct. 4, 1801, aet. 80 years. (Hist. Hingham)

She died Dec. 3, 1806, in her 83rd year and Benjamin died Dec. 5, 1808, in his 92nd year. (Hist. Hingham). It will be noted that the two sisters, Esther and Jemima, married two brothers, Elijah and Samuel Stodder.

When he became twenty-one he married (pub., at Weymouth, Sept. 12, 1719) Sarah Derby, widow of William Dyer, Jr. She was a daughter of Edward and Ruth (Whitmarsh) Derby and was born at Braintree, June 19, 1693. Her first marriage had been to William Dyer, Jr., published Nov. 13, 1714. Dyer died Feb. 9, 1717, leaving a widow and perhaps a son, William, b. Sept. 29, 1717. (Note that these dates are according to the old style calendar.)

Sarah Cobb died in July, 1737 and John Cobb married (2), Feb. 1 (or 8), 1737-8, at Abington, Ruth Chard, widow of Thomas Chard. "Thomas Chard and Ruth Jackson weare married November 9 1731" (Abington Rec.)

John Cobb, blacksmith, bought a piece of land on March 3, 1723 from Benjamin Smith. This land is described as 15 acres in Scituate at or near Drinkwater, being in the present town of Hanover, near the Abington line. It is probable that this land was purchased with the money that came to his wife Sarah from the estate of her father, Edward Derby. The will of Edward Derby, dated Jan. 4, probated Jan. 13, 1723-4, bequeathed property to his wife Rebecca, sons Jonathan and Samuel, daughters Sarah Cob, Jane and Ruth Derby, "Jane to have the silver spoons which her mother left."

John Cobb was a blacksmith, as were his father and grandfather before him. He was probably not a very devoted church member, but his second wife seems to have finally brought him into the fold, as appears by the following from Abington church records.

"Aug. 25, 1740. Unice the daughter of Ruth Cobb was Baptize att her Desire her husband not having owned the Covenant, but neglecting & refusing to Do it.

Oct. 6, 1740. John Cobb & Ruth his wife & Samuel Bate were admitted."

The gravestones of John and Sarah Cobb are in the northern part of Abington Cemetery, that of Sarah being badly broken. They read as follows:

Here Lies Buried the Body of Mr John Cobb who Died April 29th 1743 in ye 45th Year of his Age

David Cobb sold his farm and homestead in Abington and moved to Cummington, Mass. about the year 1788. He lived in the latter town the remainder of his life and died there Jany. 26, 1821. Cummington is a town that was largely settled by Abington families and is located in the hilly country of western Massachusetts.

David Cobb was a man of large frame and great strength, with a light complexion, blue eyes and round face. The story has been handed down that he could lift a five-pail iron kettle with his little finger only. (Marshall Cobb) He wrote an excellent clear hand, which we may see in his family bible, where he wrote out the genealogy of his family and the record of births, marriages and deaths of his children and grand-children. This account is the oldest written genealogy of the Cobb family. All the other family records in bibles of his descendants in Cummington, Abington, Cleveland and elsewhere either have a common origin or have been copied from it.
